It is adapted to the traising of water or other liquids, under all possible conditions where steam can be obtained, operating absolutely without machinery with more economy and less liability to deraugement than any pump in was. As a MINING PUMP its advantages are most obvious.

The steam is condensed instead of being exhausted into the shaft or tunnel. It is not affected by mud, sand or gril, having no working parts to west or cut out.

It is economical of steam, because all friction is avoided, and the steam is made to do double duty, that of direct pressure and then by consensation, utilizing the atmospheric pressure and then by consensation, utilizing the atmospheric pressure in the principal of the property of the pressure in the principal of the property of the principal conditions are any attention whatever.
